The first talk in the technical session was delivered by Shri. Asoke Tigidi, Rtd. IAS officer. He began by sharing his own experiences as a student, discussing the challenges he faced in choosing his dream career. He spoke about Einstein’s theory of relativity to metaphorically describe passion, explaining how a moment feels prolonged when in discomfort but flies by when in good company, thus illustrating the essence of true passion. Sir Tigidi emphasized that developing a deep passion for our work is crucial, stating, “You are what you think you are,” and encouraged students to act like the professional they aspire to become.

She highlighted the significance of vocational training, particularly pointing out the local shortage of skilled professionals and suggesting students consider these paths to meet regional demands. Madam also touched on the array of professional courses available—from NEET and JEE for medical and engineering aspirants to CLAT for law and various design tests for creative fields. He underscored the importance of choosing the right career, emphasizing that it leads to personal satisfaction, professional interest, stability, superior job performance, and monetary benefits. Advocating for the banking sector, Sir Beryl highlighted its well-recognized brand, professional image, and focus on employee growth. He noted the sector’s commitment to integrity and the diverse opportunities it presents, from structured career progression for MBA, CA, CS, and ICWA graduates to inclusive entry points for class 12 students.

The last speaker of the program was Dr. Surajit Sen, Associate Professor ICFAI University Meghalaya who spoke on the topic “A Checklist to locating your passion and planning your Career”. Sir Surajit began his session with a thought provoking exercise, prompting students to write an essay on ‘the aim in life’. He engaged with the students’ diverse aspirations, ranging from businessmen to entrepreneurs, emphasizing that we all harbor dreams. Diving into the program’s theme, he unpacked the concept of passion and presented strategies to identify and foster it.

The Career Counseling Program at IUM, Tura Campus not only aimed to provide students with guidance on choosing suitable career paths but also emphasized the importance of self-exploration and personal growth. By encouraging students to identify their passions and interests, the program assisted them in making well-informed decisions about their future endeavors.

This personalized approach helped students gain valuable insights into various career options and understand the steps required to achieve their goals. The presence of experienced speakers and counselors further enriched the program, providing students with practical advice and inspiration to pursue their dreams with confidence.

Moreover, the emphasis on aligning academic choices with personal interests and talents underscored the significance of enjoying the learning process and finding fulfillment in one's chosen career path. The program also shed light on the evolving nature of education and the importance of acquiring skills that are relevant in today's dynamic job market.
